at years of discretion and wen a reputation for capability, a bank will, simply on his note, backed only by his character, advance him sufficient money (usually a moderate sum) to start in business. This is considered-and the conclusion is based on results-to The District Council (No. 1) of Derry considered at its monthly meeting on Saturday a report from a specially uppointed committee of its members respecting the condition of old Glendermott graveyard. The committee was appointed after receiving a letter from a gentleman of Scotland, pointing out that the condition of the commetry where several prominent personages connected with the siege of Derry were interred was, when he visited it lately. ly, character plays a relatively larger part in the loaning operations of a small bank than a Wall street bonk, small bank than a Wall street bank, and in the beginning of a business man's career. Its relative importance is a matter of environment.

In 1895 a New York firm of the chants became heavily involved in enterprises that were sound but in which the realization of cash was slow. The head of the house informed the representatives of the banks that they would be obliged to "carry the firm" through be obliged to "carry the firm" brough its difficulties or there would or a heavy failure, when the banks would be heavy losers. The banks agreed that this was so, and assumed the ourden. In the ensuing investigation it appeared that the head of the house, in securing loans, had omitted certain facts that indicated a lack of frank-ness we will say. Six years after that same man was elected president of a newly formed industrial corporation of trust. It appeared in the money mar-ket as a large borrower. There was no reason why the accommodation should not be granted, until a particular banker was attracted by the signa-ture of the president, when he recalled the episode of 1895. The final result was that the bankers informed the disectors of the corporation that they ould only have the credit desired when nother president was elected. The investigation into the life insurance companies has its humorous side. An attorney for the Mutual, Mr. Beck, One of the golden opportunities of the sneak thief which so largely seems to have been overlooked, is the cuff button as it lies tempthally all the summer long in those working hours when the wearer in his shirt sleeves sheds them on desk, chair or table.

It is surprising to one who will make use of his eyes, just how much money is spent on cuff buttons. For a solid gold button of the thinnest fourteen carat fineness, the retail price is about 5, while in many cases there is 510 worth of virgin gold in the plainest pattern of buttons. Frequently an inset stone may make a pair of buttons of the country. It was of humanity.
